Study: U.S. Docs Have Cut Hours

Chicago

American doctors have steadily cut their work hours over the past decade, a new study finds, something that experts say may only worsen the U.S. health care situation.

2K

The average number of patients cared for by a single primary care physician in the United States.

It's not that doctors are terrible slackers. Average hours dropped from about 55 to 51 hours per week from 1996 to 2008, according to the analysis in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

That's the equivalent of losing 36,000 doctors in a decade, according to the researchers. And it raises policy questions amid a looming primary care doctor shortage.

The overall decrease in hours coincided with a 25 percent decline in pay for doctors' services, adjusted for inflation. And when the researchers looked closely at U.S. cities with the lowest and highest doctor fees, they found doctors working less hours in the low-fee cities and more hours in the high-fee cities. Bonuses Rise at Financial Firms

Wall Street payouts totaled $20B in '09 amid bad economy

New York

Wall Street bonuses climbed 17 percent in 2009 to $20.3 billion as many of the investment banks that were bailed out at taxpayer expense reported blowout profits.

The announcement Tuesday by New York Comptroller Thomas DiNapoli was likely to outrage many Americans who are barely getting by. And it happened on the same day that private economists reported a plunge in consumer confidence — a blow to hopes that spending by shoppers would help speed up an economic recovery.

"Wall Street is vital to New York's economy, and the dollars generated by the industry help the state's bottom line," DiNapoli said. "But for most Americans, these huge bonuses are a bitter pill and hard to comprehend. ... Taxpayers bailed them out, and now they're back making money while many

The average bonus at Wall Street firms last year was 17 percent higher than 2008.

New York families are still struggling to make ends meet."

The reason for the surge in bonuses was simple: Wall Street firms had a great year.

Broker-dealer operations associated with the New York Stock Exchange earned a record $49.9 billion through the year's first three quarters.

The 2009 bonuses were actually modest compared to the bonan-zas Wall Street workers enjoyed between 2005 and 2007. The annual payout in those gilded days averaged $31 billion, or about $173,000 per worker.

News of the windfall came amid fresh signs that the public's mood was darkening. A monthly poll gauging consumers' confidence unexpectedly fell to a 10-month low in February as Americans worried more about jobs, the Conference

Lending Drops

Lending by the banking industry fell by $587 billion, or 7.5 percent, in 2009, the largest annual decline since the 1940s, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. reported Tuesday. FDIC Chairman Sheila Bair said that some small banks have dialed back on lending because of financial weakness. But Bair said the vast majority of the decline was the result of lending cutbacks by the largest banks, which have tightened qualification standards and boosted their reserve funds. (AP)

Board said Tuesday. The pessimism cast doubt on hopes that shoppers would begin spending more and accelerate a recovery.

At the White House, press secretary Robert Gibbs said President Obama believed that some progress had been made toward curbing executive compensation. But "I think it's fair to say the president remains frustrated and believes that the compensation practices of Wall Street have a long way to go." (AP)

SCIENCE

Fossils of a previously undiscovered species of dinosaur have been found in slabs of Utah sandstone that were so hard that explosives had to be used to free them, scientists said Tuesday. The bones found at Dinosaur National Monument belonged to a type of sauropod — long-necked plant-eaters that were said to be the largest animal ever to roam land. Of the 120 or so known species of sauropods, complete skulls have been found for just eight. (AP)

Brown Called Turncoat

Activists online bash senator for backing Democrats' jobs bill

Boston

A month after being crowned the darling of national conservatives, Republican Sen. Scott Brown of Massachusetts is being branded "Benedict Brown" for siding with Democrats in favor of a jobs bill endorsed by the Obama administration.

Like the four other GOP senators who joined him, the man who won the late Democrat Edward Kennedy's seat says it's about jobs, not party politics.

The four other Republican senators who broke ranks — Olympia Snowe and Susan Collins of Maine; George Voinovich of Ohio; and Christopher "Kit" Bond of Missouri — also were criticized on Tuesday. But Brown was the big target on conservative Web sites, talk shows and even the Facebook page his campaign has promoted as an example of his new-media savvy.

Sen. Scott Brown, R-Mass., was one of five Republicans to back a jobs bill Monday.

"We campaigned for you. We donated to your campaign. And you turned on us like every other RINO," said one writer, using the initials for "Republican-In-Name-Only."

The conservative-tilting Drudge Report colored a photo of Brown on its home page in scarlet.

The new senator responded by calling into a Boston radio station.

"I've taken three votes," Brown said with exasperation. "And to say I've sold out any particular party or interest group, I think, is certainly unfair."

National Republican groups, "tea party" members and an array of conservative special interests, all claimed a share of the credit for Brown's upset win in the battle to succeed the legendary Kennedy.

"You've already turned out to be as big an idiot as Obama," said one Facebook poster. "Enjoy your one term as senator." GLEN JOHNSON (AP)

CBO Study: Stimulus Created Up to 2.1 Million Jobs

Washington

The economic stimulus law added between 1 million and 2.1 million workers to employment rolls by the end of last year, a new report released Tuesday by congressional economists said.

The nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office study also said the $862 billion stimulus added between 1.5 to 3.5 percentage points to the growth of the economy in 2009.

The report reflects agreement among economists that the measure boosted the economy. But the wide range of estimates means it won't resolve the debate over how effective the stimulus has been.

The CBO projects that the stimulus measure will have a greater impact this year, boosting gross domestic product by 1.4 to 4 percentage points and lowering the unemployment rate by 0.7 to 1.8 percentage points.

The report said the most efficient parts of the stimulus include infrastructure projects such as road- and bridge-building and more generous unemployment benefits. (AP)

Aide: Cheney Suffered a Mild Heart Attack

Republican resting in D.C. hospital after bout of chest pain

Washington

Former vice president Dick Cheney sustained a “mild heart attack” but is feeling better and likely to leave the hospital within a day or two, an aide said Tuesday.

Cheney, 69, who has remained a forceful advocate for the former Bush administration and a leading Republican figure since leaving office last year, has a history of heart trouble. He was admitted to George Washington University Hospital in Washington on Monday after experiencing chest pains.

Lab tests revealed evidence of a mild heart attack, Cheney aide

Peter Long said in a statement. Long reported that Cheney is “feeling good” after undergoing a stress test and a heart catheterization. The statement from Cheney’s office did not say whether he needed to have an angioplasty, a procedure to clear a heart blockage.

The heart attack is Cheney’s fifth since age 37.

Former president George W. Bush spoke with Cheney by telephone Tuesday afternoon, a Bush aide said from Dallas.

Cheney had bypass surgery in 1988, as well as two later angioplasties to clear narrowed coronary arteries.

In 2001, he had a special pacemaker implanted in his chest. In addition, doctors in 2008 restored a normal rhythm to his heart with an electric shock. BEN FELLER (AP)

Afghans Wary of NATO Mission

As Marja offensive unfolds, tribal chiefs resist choosing sides

Marja, Afghanistan

Bouwudin courteously greeted the Afghan and American officers who came to meet him, offering tea and eventually a meal as the meeting lingered on. No amount of invitations could get him to walk a few hundred yards to the Marine base.

"I'm sorry, but I can't do that; it's too early," said Bouwudin, a tribal chief. "I'll go when security has come back."

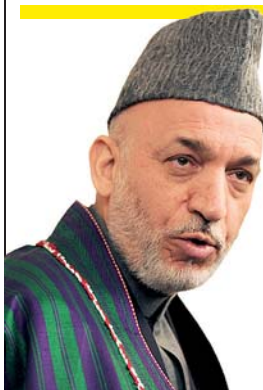

Despite an 11-day-old U.S.-led attack to capture the Taliban stronghold of Marja, most Afghan tribal leaders in this town are like Bouwudin — still on the fence. The mission may be proceeding militarily but it has not yet won over the people who matter most.

Many of them seem unwilling to believe that the Americans and the Afghan military will stay long enough to ensure that the Taliban never come back.

Winning over people like Bouwudin is key to NATO's efforts in the embattled Afghan south. The critical step is to prove that American troops and Afghan units are going to stay — and provide better governance than the strict Islamist Taliban, who, residents say, at least ruled the town without corruption and allowed the lucrative opium poppy business to thrive.

Iran's Nuclear Offer Falls Short of Demands

Vienna

Iran has formally set out its terms for giving up most of its cache of enriched uranium in a confidential document — and the conditions fall short of what has been demanded by the United States and other world powers.

Washington dismissed the document — seen by The Associated Press on Tuesday — as a "red herring" and warned it would consult with its allies on new penalties on Iran to punish it for its nuclear defiance.

The document says Tehran is ready to hand over the bulk of its stockpile, as called for under a deal brokered by the International Atomic Energy Agency and endorsed by the five permanent U.N. Security Council members and Germany.

But Iran adds that it must simultaneously receive fuel rods for its research reactor in return and that such an exchange must take place on Iranian territory.

The Iranian offer was sure to be rejected by the six powers, which have waited for nearly six months for such an official answer.

The U.S. and others fear Iran's nuclear program is geared toward making nuclear weapons, while Tehran claims it is simply to provide more power for its growing population. The United Nations has slapped sanctions on Iran for its defiance on nuclear issues.

Ali Asghar Soltanieh, the chief Iranian delegate to the IAEA, told The AP the document — his letter to International Atomic Energy Agency chief Yukiya Amano — was "formally reflecting" Iran's position, which has been expressed to the IAEA and to the media in various forms. GEORGE JAHN (AP)

Coup in Niger Earns Wide Praise

Military appoints interim leader after unseating president

Niamey, Niger

It's politics, upside down.

The elected president of a uranium-rich nation morphs into a despot and refuses to relinquish power, prompting the army to stage a popular coup with guns blazing in the name of democracy.

Most governments check executive excesses through sister branches — the legislature, the judiciary. In Niger, the military has assumed the bizarre yet vital role of safeguarding democratic institutions by force — most recently by taking hostage an entire government.

The soldiers who overthrew Mamadou Tandja are vowing to restore civilian rule, a claim that's often proved hollow among Africa's myriad juntas. The difference in Niger, though, is profound: Most people here actually believe them.

"For democracy activists like us, it's difficult to applaud a coup d'état," said Marou Amadou, a leading human rights worker who was jailed for a month during Tandja's regime. "But this had to happen, and we are overjoyed. There was no other way."

Though officially condemned by governments worldwide, Tandja's ouster has been widely praised at home: by unions, human rights groups and local media.

On Tuesday, the junta named one-time information minister Mahamadou Dandah as civilian prime minister to lead the nation's transitional government until elections are held. TODD PITMAN (AP)

Darfur Rebels, Sudan Sign Truce

Cease-fire is viewed as step toward ending seven-year conflict

Cairo

Darfur's most powerful rebel group and the Sudanese government on Tuesday signed a truce after a year of internationally sponsored negotiations, raising hopes the bloody seven-year conflict could draw to a close.

Rebel leader Khalil Ibrahim of the Justice and Equality Movement announced the cease-fire would begin that night as the international sponsors of the talks announced a $1 billion development fund for the war-ravaged region.

The once bitter enemies, Ibrahim and Sudanese President Omar al-Bashir, shook hands and embraced after the signing.

The next challenge for the mediators will be getting the dozens of other rebel splinter groups to join the process as the arduous power and wealth-sharing talks begin. Previous cease-fires and partial peace deals were short-lived.

"This framework agreement is a very important step," Ibrahim said. "We point out, however, that the road to peace still needs much patience and honest concessions from both sides."

Al-Bashir said he hoped to see a full peace pact by mid-March and praised the presence of other rebel groups at the ceremony.

"With this agreement, we take a major step toward ending the war," he said.

Tahir al-Faki, a JEM senior official, said the agreement commits the government to release all of its fighters currently on death row — nearly 100 — for their role in a massive attack on the capital in 2008.

NTSB Hears From Metro

Transit agency brass focus on improving the culture of safety

Washington

Metro leaders stressed to federal investigators on Tuesday that efforts to address safety concerns are under way, even as more details about the transit system's deadly train crash last year emerged.

Members of the National Transportation Safety Board gathered in Washington for the first day of a three-day hearing into the June crash that killed nine people when a train plowed into another train stopped on the tracks.

NTSB member Robert L. Sumwalt said the hearing will supplement facts and circumstances surrounding the accident and help the board to eventually determine the probable cause of the crash and whether it should make safety recommendations.

Peter Benjamin, head of Metro's board of directors, said the board sets policy and overall objectives for the transit system, and receives reports about major accidents but relies on Metro's senior management to monitor routine safety. Benjamin said since last year's accident, the board has recognized there needs to be a "cultural" change in dealing with safety at Metro.

"It's abundantly clear that what we have been doing is not what we can continue to do," he said. (AP)

Va. Gov. Doesn't Rule Out VP Run On Radio Show

Richmond, Va.

Gov. Bob McDonnell wouldn't commit on a live radio show to staying on the job the full four years if offered a spot on a national Republican ticket.

McDonnell said in his first monthly appearance on Washington's WTOP Radio that he had no plans to leave before his term ends in 2014.

WTOP's resident political analyst, Mark Plotkin, asked McDonnell whether he would exit for a vice presidential bid. McDonnell avoided an unequivocal answer, saying, "There are a lot of good vice presidential candidates out there." (AP)

Area Unemployment Rates Below U.S. Average

Unemployment rates in the Washington region were well below the national average in December, though the city itself continues to struggle with record joblessness. In December 2009, the national jobless rate was 10 percent, but the District's hit 12.1 percent. But Arlington County, Alexandria and Fairfax County all had rates below 5 percent. Montgomery County's jobless rate was 5.2 percent, and Prince William County's rate was 5.5 percent, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. (AP)

HEALTH CARE: HOW TO GET THERE FROM HERE

To: Members of Congress

Congress has labored and given birth to twin bills on health care that were poorly rated by two-thirds of those polled. Not surprising because, as the old saying goes, “If you want a job to be done right, DON’T DO IT YOURSELF UNLESS YOU KNOW HOW!”

The sensible way to deal with a legislative challenge of this complexity and magnitude would be to give it to a bipartisan study group whose members, consultants and staff would have, together, literally hundreds of years of experience and expertise in all aspects of health care. Then give them a few months for research and analysis and to come up with legislation to be submitted to Congress. If this process had been started last February we would have had a praise worthy, bribery free, bipartisan bill signed into law last August. It’s not too late to get it right by starting the process now and giving the study group six months to complete its work, giving us a sound bill signed into law next August. Turning the job over to experts would free the President and Congress to focus on what they should have been working on 24/7 for the past year -- job creation, the housing crisis, disastrous deficit spending and the Wall Street stench. This would be a good CYA strategy and a win for everybody except the challengers in the 2010 and 2012 elections. Of course the biggest winners would be the people. When was the last time that happened?

Following are some random thoughts for consideration.

DEFENSIVE MEDICINE is the practice of ordering more tests and costlier tests than are actually needed for proper diagnosis and treatment to protect yourself if you end up in court. (For example, ordering a more expensive MRI even though a CAT scan would be adequate because a trial attorney could easily convince a jury that an MRI is more definitive than a CAT scan so why wasn’t it ordered?). It is estimated that defensive medicine adds 400 million dollars annually to the cost of health care. Some think that tort reform will solve the problem. It won’t. Tort reform will reduce the cost of malpractice insurance but it won’t reduce the absolute necessity for physicians to protect themselves against the possibility of being sued for malpractice.

Malpractice is defined as “failure to meet the standard of care of the community if the patient is injured.” Under the constitution we are entitled to a trial by a jury of our peers. For a physician a jury of peers would be a jury of physicians and nurses. This will never happen so a jury of non-physicians and non-nurses is expected to judge whether “the standard of care of the community” was met. And what if this is a jury like the one that awarded ten million dollars to a woman who carelessly spilled hot coffee on her legs and then sued the restaurant that sold the coffee to her? No wonder being sued for malpractice is the worst nightmare of every physician. No wonder physicians feel compelled to protect themselves by practicing defensive (protective) medicine.

I have devised a plan that would eliminate this problem by assuring that no physician would be sued for malpractice, yet increase the likelihood that physicians who are negligent or careless would be identified and appropriately punished. At the same time it would enable patients who are injured to seek compensation without the need to hire a lawyer and share the compensation with a lawyer. Sound impossible? Not at all. The plan itself is simple, logical and fool proof. What’s impossible is getting it through Congress because it would be smothered in the cradle by the trial lawyers and insurance companies that it would put out of business. Saving 400 million dollars a year is one more reason to have a bipartisan study group which could include the plan within comprehensive legislation submitted to Congress for an up or down vote.

DEATH WITH DIGNITY. We spend an estimated 200 million dollars a year to keep terminally ill patients alive against their wishes but the waste of a billion dollars over five years pales in importance when compared to the reality that what we are doing to these mostly elderly patients is immoral and inhumane. Here’s how to end this mindless cruelty. Everyone on Medicare should be required to choose one of the following options: 1) If terminally ill I wish to have my life prolonged by every available means including heroic measures. 2) If terminally ill I wish to have my life prolonged by routine practices but not by heroic measures. 3) If terminally ill I wish to have comfort care but no life prolonging measures whatsoever. The choice would be encoded on the Medicare card along with the patient’s YES or NO decision on resuscitation. Failure to honor the patient’s wishes would be a Federal offense punishable by fines. This senseless savagery must be stopped.

COMPETITION AND CHOICE has provided affordable food and shelter for the past century and can do the same for health care. To facilitate competition among insurers the government should establish a package of basic benefits (PBB) identical with what Medicare now provides, and require every insurer to provide this precise package at advertised prices for individuals in age groups under 30, 30 to 50 and 50 to 65 and for families of 2, 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 members. Individuals and families would then choose the plan that best meets their needs based on price, reputation of the insurer and convenience of access to services just as they now decide where to buy their groceries and TV sets. Insurers must be allowed to operate across state lines and must be governed by anti-trust laws.

True competition and choice will end the era of over paid executives and excessive dividends to shareholders. “Cadillac plans” would still be offered by some insurers, would take many forms, and those who buy them would do so on their own. In sparsely populated areas where for profit or even nonprofit insurers can’t survive, co-ops should be encouraged and even subsidized. Co-ops brought electricity to these areas 70 years ago and can bring health care to them today.

EMPLOYER PROVIDED HEALTH INSURANCE was one of the worst ideas to come out of the gate in the last hundred years. It has driven some businesses into bankruptcy and been a factor in the decision of some to move to Mexico or China. It has inhibited the start up and expansion of small businesses thus slowing the creation of new jobs. So why is this loser being pushed, even mandated, by the White House and the Hill? Instead, as soon as competition and choice is up and running, companies should be given four years to negotiate pay raises in lieu of health care benefits so employees can shop for and choose the plan that is best for them, buy it, own it and carry it with them from job to job. And if every dollar spent for health insurance is made tax deductible, this change would be tax neutral for employees as it would be in either case for employers.

PRE-EXISTING CONDITIONS. An equally onerous issue is the fact that some insurers drop patients who develop health problems that require very costly care. What is needed is to prohibit dropping any patient for any reason except non-payment of premiums. That’s enforceable. To deal with the issue of pre-existing conditions, start by having the government create an application form that contains only the first two initials and last name plus date of birth of everyone to be covered and no medical questions whatsoever. Then require every insurer to use this form. This not only conceals pre-existing conditions but also the gender of the applicant.

Having now required insurers to care for patients who have or could develop health problems which could require hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of care, the government should assume the role of insurer of last resort and pick up the cost of care exceeding, say, $25,000 for any one patient in any one calendar year. This would give insurers a practical basis for estimating their costs and setting their premiums. The annual cost to the government would probably be less than the cost of a couple of F 22 fighter planes, of which we have bought and paid for 145 at a cost of 143 million dollars per plane. So can we really afford organ transplants? I think so.

THE MEDICARE MESS. Increasing numbers of physicians are refusing to care for Medicare patients because the reimbursement doesn’t cover the cost of providing the care. To make matters worse, Medicare pays only 80% of the allowed amount and leaves the physician with the overhead cost of collecting the remaining 20% from one of the dozens of companies providing supplemental insurance. This problem should have been eliminated decades ago by having everyone drop supplemental insurance, increase their payments to Medicare and Medicare would then pay 100% of the allowed amount to the physician immediately. This would not solve the underpayment problem but it would remove one irritant and should be done now. Then solve the underpayment problem before the Baby Boomers flood the Medicare scene and can’t find enough physicians willing to care for them. The government needs to demonstrate that it can make this existing “Public Option” work before it starts a second even larger one.

Executive vows vigilance on safety as he admits recalls are not a surefire fix

Washington

The president of Toyota's U.S. operations acknowledged to skeptical lawmakers on Tuesday that the company's recalls of millions of its cars may "not totally" solve the problem of sudden and dangerous acceleration.

"We are vigilant, and we continue to look for potential causes," Toyota's James Lentz told a congressional panel. However, he repeated his company's position that unexpected acceleration in some of the company's cars and trucks was caused by one of two problems — misplaced floor mats and sticking accelerator pedals.

He insisted electronic systems connected to the gas pedal and fuel line did not contribute to the problem, drawing sharp criticism from lawmakers who said such a possibility should be further explored — and from a tearful woman driver who could not stop her runaway Lexus.

"Shame on you, Toyota," Rhonda Smith of Sevierville, Tenn., said at a congressional hearing. Then she added a second "shame on you" directed at federal highway safety regulators.

Texas Republican Rep. Joe Barton cautioned his colleagues early in the hearing against conducting a "witch hunt." But midway through Lentz's testimony, Barton said of Toyota's investigation of the problems: "In my opinion, it's a sham."

Lentz said the company had

Rhonda Smith of Sevierville, Tenn., fights back tears as she testifies before Congress Tuesday about driving a Toyota vehicle that accelerated to 100 mph and wouldn't stop.

Backstory

Three congressional panels are investigating Toyota's problems, which affect a huge number of Americans. Toyota has recalled about 8.5 million vehicles worldwide — more than 6 million in the United States — since last fall because of unintended acceleration problems in multiple models and braking issues in the Prius hybrid. It is also investigating steering concerns in Corollas. People with Toyotas have complained of their vehicles' speeding out of control despite efforts to slow down, sometimes resulting in deadly crashes. The government has received complaints of 34 deaths linked to sudden acceleration of Toyota vehicles since 2000. (AP) not completely ruled out an electronics malfunction and was still investigating causes of the sudden acceleration. Still, "We have not found a malfunction" in the electronics of any of the cars at issue, he said.

As to Smith's harrowing story,

"I'm embarrassed for what happened," Lentz said. "I want her and her husband to feel safe about driving our products."

Lentz has said in the past that he was confident Toyota's fixes on the recalled vehicles would correct the problems. But when pressed by Energy and Commerce Committee Chairman Henry Waxman, D-Calif., on whether the two recalls Toyota put in place to deal with the issue would completely solve it, Lentz replied: "Not totally."

Lawmakers heard a brief but riveting description of the problem from Smith, the Tennessee woman whose Toyota-made Lexus suddenly zoomed to 100 miles per hour as she tried to get it to stop — shifting to neutral, trying to throw the car into reverse and hitting the emergency brake.

Finally, her car slowed enough that she was able to pull it off the road onto the median and turn off the engine.

Fighting back tears, she described her nightmare ride of October 2006, calling it "a near-death experience."

"After six miles, God intervened" and slowed the car, she said.

Swiss picks up gold after U.S. star falters in fourth-medal try

Alpine Skiing

Carlo Janka of Switzerland added the Olympic gold medal to his world championship in giant slalom on Tuesday, while Bode Miller failed to finish in his bid for a record fourth men's Alpine medal.

The 23-year-old Janka led after the first run and had a combined two-leg time of 2 minutes, 37.83 seconds.

"It was something special today," Janka said. "I was a little bit nervous between the runs. I had a great second run without mistakes."

Norway took the silver and bronze medals. Kjetil Jansrud jumped from 11th after the first run to take silver, 0.39 seconds back, and Aksel Lund Svindal was 0.61 back for bronze, matching Miller's three-medal tally at the Vancouver Games. Svindal won the super-G and was second in downhill.

and then couldn't correct his line coming out of a right-hand gate in the second half.

"I'm taking more risk than everyone else. That's partly why I'm able to get medals," Miller told The Associated Press afterward.

"I did a good job today, too," he continued. "I was right there. I was right on the edge."

U.S. men's head coach Sasha Rearick said Miller "was skiing with passion" but paid the price when he tried to make up time.

The 32-year-old Miller, from Franconia, N.H., won gold in the super-combined, silver in super-G and bronze in downhill, and was trying to become the first Alpine skier to win four medals in the same Olympics. His last chance will be in the slalom scheduled for Saturday.

The U.S. team finished off the podium for the first time in Alpine racing at Whistler, after getting an American-record eight medals from the first six events.

Pre-race favorite Ted Ligety of Park City, Utah, who leads the World Cup GS standings, was ninth, 1.28 seconds back.

U.S. Grabs Silver in Nordic Combined Relay

Nordic Skiing

Austria has defended its gold medal in the Nordic combined team relay, edging the Americans, who settled for their second silver medal of the Vancouver Games.

Billy Demong, of Vermontville, N.Y., had a slight edge over Mario Stecher heading into the stadium at Whistler Olympic Park but stumbled at the turn and watched the Austrian zoom past him on the straightaway for a 5.2-second victory Tuesday.

Austria's winning time in the 4x5-kilometer relay following a jump off the large hill was 49 minutes, 31.6 seconds. Germany won bronze, finishing 19.5 seconds behind the winners.

It looked like the United States was finally going to get rid of its golden goose egg in Nordic sports at the Olympics as Demong erased a 14.1-second deficit he inherited from Johnny Spillane on the final exchange. He and Stecher took turns in the lead until the Austrian's strong push at the finish had him cruising in first.

The Americans' previous best finish in this event was fourth in Salt Lake City in 2002.

Spillane's silver medal in the normal hill competition on Feb. 14 was the first U.S. Olympic medal in Nordic combined — a ski jump followed by a brutal race of speed around a cross-country track.

Ten days later, he has another.

But they aren't rushing to give up their long-shot status.

They will be favored Wednesday in the quarterfinals to beat Switzerland, yet the Americans claim Russia and Canada are still the tournament powerhouses.

Howard was injured Monday night in Washington's win over the Chicago Bulls, only his fourth game with the Wizards since being acquired from Dallas in a seven-player trade on Feb. 13.

He collided with the Bulls' Flip

Murray with 4:23 to play in the first quarter and stayed on the floor for a minute before being helped off the court by two trainers.

Howard started three games for Washington and scored 14.5 points a game to help the Wizards go 3-1 since the deal, which sent starter Caron Butler to the Mavericks.

Howard has averaged 15.3 points and 6.0 rebounds since his 2003-04 rookie season with the Mavs.

No decision has been announced on whether Howard would have surgery.

"We're disappointed for Josh personally. He did an outstanding job," said Grunfeld.

"We feel bad for him. The guys will have to step up in his absence." (AP)

TV Lineup

WIZARDS (7 P.M., CSN) Andray Blatche leads the Wizards against the Memphis Grizzlies.

LOCAL COLLEGE HOOPS (7 P.M., ESPN; 9 P.M., MY20) Virginia Tech visits Boston College, and Maryland takes on Clemson.

Adult Major Depression Research Study: Novel Medication

If you (or someone you know) have been diagnosed with major depression, you may be able to participate in a National Institute of Mental Health research study investigating a novel medication. This treatment study is studying if a research medication can produce a rapid reduction of depressive symptoms in patients with treatment-resistant major depressive disorder.

This 7-week inpatient study is conducted at the NIH Clinical Center in Bethesda, Maryland, and compares the medication to a placebo (inactive salt solution). After completion of the study the participant will receive short-term treatment to transition back to the community. In addition, all research participation is without cost.

Those eligible to participate must:

- Be ages 18-65
- Have been diagnosed with major depression
- Have taken two antidepressants that did not help

For further information on participation, please call

Off the Cuffs

BRYAN BEDDER/GETTY IMAGES

Chilly Wintour

Vogue editor Anna Wintour is oft vilified for her ice queen persona and — thanks to a deliciously frosty performance by Meryl Streep in "The Devil Wears Prada" — unrivaled ranking as World's Bitchiest Boss. But while Wintour's withering gaze can make even the most lauded designer quake in his

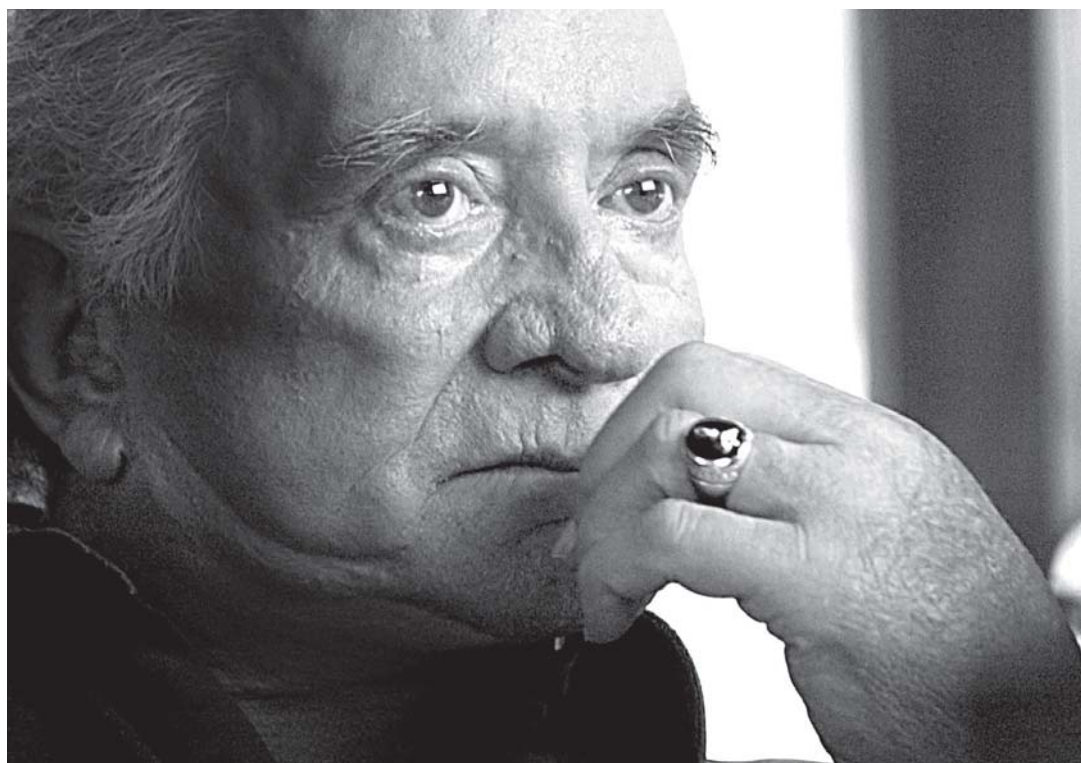

By Betsy Lowther

Gucci loafers, she's recently begun to expose a side of herself that is wholly sympathetic — and maybe even a little bit sad.

Nothing has been more revealing than the excellent documentary about Vogue, "The September Issue," released on DVD Tuesday (we suggest you spring for the special $30 Barnes & Noble version, which offers exclusive behind-the-scenes extras). On the surface, the film doesn't do much to refute Wintour's "Nuclear Wintour" nickname: For most of the film, she's cast as the humorless counterpart to colleague Grace Coddington's happy creativity. But closer inspection reveals a surprising isolation.

Yes, she's revered, but you have to wonder: Does she ever just grab a beer, kick back and have a good laugh? It might appear that she has everything — right down to subservient assistants and next season's Prada — but it looks pretty lonely at the top.

Johnny Cash died six years ago, but not before recording "American VI: Ain't No Grave," which will go on sale Friday.

Immortal Voice

Johnny Cash's last album release allows listeners to reconnect with the late icon

Music

Johnny Cash's voice comes in with a rumble, singing that there "ain't no grave that can hold my body down." A shuffling beat that sounds like heavy chains being carried back and forth accompanies him.

It sounds both reassuring and — let's be honest — a little creepy.

He's been dead for six years now. Even a voice that iconic can't speak from the Great Beyond, can it?

No, it's what he left behind — the sixth and last of the American Recordings series he made with producer Rick Rubin. The disc, "American VI: Ain't No Grave," will be released on Friday, which would have been Cash's 78th birthday.

Like the series' fifth disc, also released posthumously in 2006, it contains mostly recordings made by Cash in the last few months of his life. His way of working through the grief over the death of his wife, June, death, also in 2003, was to work as much as his health permitted.

Life Goes On

It's not just the elder Cash who's singing about death and beyond. On her most recent album,

Johnny Cash's daughter Rosanne Cash penned the song "I Was Watching You," which deals with spirits comforting us from the hereafter. According to The Associated Press, the similarity is just a coincidence — she hasn't been able to listen to her father's last recording yet. Currently, the memories are too fresh, but she vows she will listen "someday." (EXPRESS)

"When we first went back and listened to the recordings after he had passed, it really just felt like this voice coming back from another place," Rubin said. "It had all this weight and gravity to it. It was scary."

The recording style for this final disc was the same as it was for the other American Recordings. An engineer would capture Cash's vocal, perhaps to a single guitar accompaniment, and Rubin later brought in session pros such as Mike Campbell, Benmont Tench and Jonny Polonsky to build an arrangement around it. The unadorned series of recordings were a late-in-life artistic revival for Cash, as he worked on songs expected and unexpected — like the memorable cover of the Nine Inch Nails' song "Hurt."

Along with the title cut, "Ain't No Grave," the songs Cash sings include ones by Kris Kristofferson, Sheryl Crow, Tom Paxton and an original he wrote in his last three years.

The final sessions produced enough material for two discs, and it was left to Rubin to decide how they would be configured. The 2006 disc was largely a rumination on mortality, but he feels the new one is more about how a person's energy can live on after death. The cover is a picture of Cash as a child.

"It does bring him back to life," he said. "He can live on by us being able to hear this. He left it for us to be able to feel him as if he were here." DAVID BAUDER (AP)

Shrieeks and Laughter

'Dead Snow' is too amusing to be a truly scary movie

DVD Review

Just a few minutes into the Norwegian horror flick "Dead Snow," as a gaggle of fit 20-somethings are climbing up a steep mountain slope to their remote vacation cabin, one of the characters comments that it's just like the setup for a horror movie. That's an unfortunate burst of winking self-awareness, suggesting that the next 90 minutes will blur the lines between homage and outright theft. And sure enough, "Dead Snow" contains all the hallmarks of a post-"Scream" scarer.

Out on a two-DVD set from IFC Films, "Dead Snow" is not, however, a self-impressed deconstruction of horror motifs, which is an approach that hasn't been fresh in years (despite current efforts to reboot the "Scream" franchise). Once the movie gets its fanboy references out of its system, it settles into a comfortable action-movie pace concerned with finding new ways to show gore and guts.

While it borrows from American sources, the flawed-but-fun "Dead Snow" is part of a small but growing Scandinavian horror scene that is gradually gaining steam both within northern Europe and around the world. Unlike the overwrought "Let the Right One In," movies such as "Dead Snow" and especially "Cold Prey" and its sequel aren't out to rethink the rules of the genre. Rather than innovate, they imitate, adhering to the standard slasher plotline: A group of young people go out of their way to get killed in increasingly baroque fashion. And yet, due to the exotic remoteness of the setting and the particular Norwegian culture these movies depict and exploit, they come across as somehow new and invigorated.

Once the characters arrive at the remote cabin in the mountains, the fun begins in earnest. A creepy visitor bursts into the cabin and relates the story of a curse that haunts the area, and soon enough, the friends are beset by otherworldly horrors. Without giving too much away, here's what you can expect from "Dead Snow": snow, blood, zombies, snow, Nazis, blood, dismemberment, snow, intestines, blood.

"Dead Snow" is as much a comedy as it is a horror flick, as Wirkola, moving the film along briskly and even jauntily, finds morbid humor in all the disembowelments, decapitations and fountains of blood.

Wirkola is a resourceful director, and "Dead Snow" is a devious film, but at times it seems too much so. Its tone becomes so jocular, its characters so knowingly two-dimensional and its stakes so low that it never seems truly scary.

The first hotel built inside Utah's Monument Valley Navajo Tribal Park, the three-story View blends in with surrounding red-rock formations and a breathtaking landscape.

A Once-Familiar View

A new hotel blends in among Monument Valley's iconic buttes

Destinations

Somewhere on Route 89 in Arizona, we began to wonder whether we'd ever make it to Monument Valley.

It was mid-January, and snow showers had turned into a full-on snowstorm. My high school friend Roy and I were driving 400-plus miles from Las Vegas to the Navajo-owned tribal park best known as the backdrop of John Wayne westerns as "Stagecoach" and "The Searchers." We plowed on, determined to get there — and to our hotel, part of the reason we were making the journey to this remote spot on the Utah-Arizona border.

The View Hotel, which opened in December 2008, is the first hotel inside Monument Valley Navajo Tribal Park. Built on a plateau, it's a simple three-story structure that blends into the environment. Each of its 96 rooms boasts floor-to-ceiling windows and a balcony with, yes, a stunning view of the East and West Mitten Buttes, breathtaking red-rock formations.

Managed by 25-year-old Navajo Armanda Ortega-Gordon and her non-Navajo father, Art Ortega, the $14 million hotel has brought change to a region known to be slow to embrace it.

Before the View opened, visitors to Monument Valley had few lodging options. They could stay at the decades-old Goulding's Lodge, just outside the park, or at nondescript motels at least 20 miles away.

Thanks to the John Wayne movies, Monument Valley is one of the most recognizable landscapes in the Fog and snow surround the Three Sisters rock formation in Monument Valley.

southwestern U.S. Many Americans, however, forgo it for Arizona's Grand Canyon and Utah's Zion National Park. You have to make a real effort to get to the nearly 30,000-acre valley, and, for some reason, European and Japanese tourists are more likely to do so than Americans.

On a tour of the 17-mile road that winds around the formations, our Navajo guide pointed out the buttes, towers and spires that are the result of millions of years of erosion and volcanic action. We stopped at the Ear of the Wind, one of the largest arches in the valley. "It looks like an ear," he said. "But it also looks like Elvis Presley in his younger years. See the hairdo inside the arch?"

The View grossed more than $8 million in its first year, Art Ortega said, and paid $1 million in taxes and fees to the Navajo Nation.

A new visitor's center with a museum opened in December, and Ortega said he hopes the hotel will attract more of a certain kind of tourist to the park. "Too bad more Americans don't come," he said.

Cause a Big Stir With a Risotto

You can fix Italy's famed rice dish with little more than olive oil and elbow grease

Prep School

On "Hell's Kitchen," irascible chef Gordon Ramsay once said that a sure way to size up a chef is to taste his or her risotto. If you've ever stirred up a batch of the creamy Italian dish, you'd understand why. Risotto isn't difficult to make, but like Ramsay, the rice concoction demands constant attention.

"You can't really turn your back on it," says Nicholas Stefanelli, executive chef at Bibiana (1100 New York Ave. NW; 202-216-9550). "For one-pot cooking, it's great, but you have to properly care for it."

The secret to risotto's gooey goodness: the alchemy that occurs when short-grain rice's natural starches dissolve during cooking, creating a creamy texture that binds the rice while preserving its al-dente-ness. But the time you must spend coaxing out that effect means relentlessly stirring (typically about 20 minutes), which has given risotto a risky rap.

Still, novices needn't shy away from the northern Italian specialty. Success often rests on whether you follow a single, simple tip, Stefanelli says: "Once you start cooking, don't stop."

A few other tips will also push your risotto in the direction of rich and creamy, rather than crunchy or gummy. Use a rice variety with a high level of the starch amylopectin, such as arborio, vialone nano or carnaroli. Arborio is widely sold at supermarkets; for the other types, check Dean & DeLuca or the Italian Store (3123 Lee Hwy., Arlington; 703-528-6266).

Risottos start with basic ingredients, including onions cooked in butter or olive oil (in which rice is also sautéed before liquid is added) as well as meat or vegetable stock. It's important to heat the stock

Another Helping Reviving Your Risotto

Reheating leftover risotto can kill its creamy texture. Instead, give the grains a new life by simply mixing an egg or two into the risotto and adding a bit of meat, veggies or cheese. Then, roll the mixture into balls and deep fry it to create arancini (Italian for "little oranges"), golden rounds that are crunchy on the outside and filled with melty risotto on the inside. You can also pan-fry crab-cake-like circles of risotto (just dust with a bit of flour and cook in olive oil) or use the starchy stuff as a thickener for a hearty soup. K.A.

before adding it to the rice little by little, says Bryan Moscatello, executive chef of Stir Food Group, which manages both Potenza (15th & H streets NW; 202-638-4444), and Zola (800 F St. NW; 202-654-0999) restaurants. "Don't take shortcuts," Moscatello says. "The key is to keep moving that rice. That makes it develop the final texture."

Besides rice, liquid and onions, you can add almost anything to risotto. "It will absorb any flavor you throw at it," Stefanelli says. Amy Morgan, one of the owners of 2 Amys (3715 Macomb St. NW; 202-885-5700), loves risotto's versatility. "Look in your refrigerator, and use what you have," she says. "Throw in mussels or vegetables. In the summer, I use zucchini."

Purists might try the classic saffron-flavored "risotto alla Milanese" or toss in fungi for a mushroom risotto. Bolder combos include seafood or seasonal veggies. More unusual spins range from lobster risotto with leeks and roasted sunchoke (a staple at Potenza) to Bibiana's pesto-and-seared-scallop one. "Look at risotto as a blank canvas," Stefanelli says.

So, a bit of sky's-the-limit creativity, along with close attention to detail? Sounds like a recipe to wow even Ramsay. KATIE ABERBACH (EXPRESS)

RISOTTO WITH MUSHROOMS AND BASIL

This delicate, traditional risotto works well as a vegetarian main dish or as a side for roast chicken or pork loin.

Ingredients

- 1 LB carnaroli risotto
- 1 LB fresh seasonal mushrooms
- 1 bunch of basil
- 1/4 LB Parmesan cheese
- 1/4 LB butter
- 1/2 bottle white wine
- 4 CUPS chicken or veggie stock
- Salt
- Pepper
- 2 cloves garlic
- 4 TBSP extra-virgin olive oil
- 1/2 yellow onion (finely diced)

Serves 4

Bring the stock to a simmer. In a separate pot, heat 1/4 tablespoon each of butter and olive oil. Once the butter-oil mixture foams, add the onion. Cook until soft and translucent. Then add the rice. Toast rice until the kernels turn translucent. Add the wine and cook until all the liquid is adsorbed and evaporated.

Then, slowly add enough stock to cover (about a cup or a cup and a half). Repeat this about three times, constantly stirring, which should take about 15 to 18 minutes. Taste the rice for doneness (you are looking for a slight firmness when you bite it). Heat a large sauté pan and cook the mushrooms for three to four minutes. While the mushrooms are cooking, add the butter, cheese and basil to the rice. Once the mushrooms are done, add to rice. Taste for seasoning and serve.

Charlie Sheen's publicist says the actor has entered rehab and is taking a break from "Two and a Half Men." Publicist Stan Rosenfield said Tuesday that Sheen has voluntarily entered rehab for an unspecified reason. The move comes roughly two months after Sheen's arrest after he was accused of holding a knife to his wife's throat and threatening to kill her. Sheen's wife, Brooke, is also in rehab for an undisclosed reason. (AP)

LIFE IS SO HARDWhine A Little Whine

Robert Pattinson has admitted that he and "Twilight" co-star Kristen Stewart are dating, putting to rest persistent rumors that the two are an item. "It is extremely difficult, but we are together, yes," Pattinson told the Sun newspaper after Britain's BAFTA awards, at which he and Stewart arrived separately. "We can't arrive at the same time because of the fans. It goes crazy. This was supposed to be a public appearance as a couple, but it's impossible. We are here together and it's a public event, but it's not easy." (EXPRESS)

"She's the only woman I've been attracted to. We love each other. We might reconcile the relationship, maybe."
